

DEBORAH LIV JOHNSON

Deborah Liv Johnson, the third of five children born to missionary parents in Tanzania, East Africa, was raised in the Mojave desert community of Ridgecrest. Her first love of music was drumming.

Deborah attended St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minnesota, graduating with a degree in creative writing. She then moved to San Diego to embark on a music career.

Deborah has released eight recordings on her own Mojave Sun Records label, selling more than 60,000 CDs as an independent artist.

Over the years, she has opened concerts for various name artists such as Dan Fogelberg, Don McLean, Olivia Newton-John, and Arlo Guthrie.

The Los Angeles Times writes:

"It is not surprising that Johnson's luxuriant alto is the album's most affecting instrument...take Johnson's tackling of the standard, Georgia on my Mind. The result is a presence, a spatiality, a soulful, elegant simplicity that is unique among the hundreds of renditions."
